

Madonna's Secret Weapon: Intraceuticals Oxygen Infusion

by azspagirl on July 29, 2010

in Beauty Trends, Spa Beat

Cat's out of the bag Madge! Madonna's skincare secret along with dozens of other Hollywood hotties like Eva Longoria, Molly Sims and Justin Timberlake ("It makes my skin look dope.") is the Intraceuticals Oxygen Infusion Treatment and product line – now available at a spa near you.

Developed in Australia, the infusion treatments are performed by a skincare professional using a three-step process to drive the innovative products deep into the skin. They call it hyaluronic layering – a non-invasive process that harnesses the deeply hydrating action of hyaluronic acid to diminish the appearance of fine lines, sagging and lackluster skin. Using an infusion wand, the therapist first uses a cooling, pressurized oxygen system to deliver the vitamin-rich serum. Next, a hydration gel is applied that prevents moisture loss. Finally, a binding cream is applied that provides a layer of intense hydration.

Take-home products enhance the treatment results and come in four lines to target various skin concerns: Rejuvenate (anti-aging), Opulence (brightening), Clarity (healing) and Atoxylene (a wrinkle smoothing injection alternative). Products start at $39 but are highly concentrated so a little goes a long way. Standouts include the Clarity Blemish Repair stick – a healing, redness-reducing wand with a replaceable tip to prevent contamination ($89) and the Opulence Brightening Wand – a soft brush tip that delivers a dose of luminosity to patchy or uneven skin tone ($89).

The Intraceuticals Oxygen Infusion treatment and skincare line is available at the Arizona Biltmore Resort & Spa in Phoenix, Glow Med Spa in Glendale and Aji Spa at the Sheraton Wild Horse Horse Pass Resort in Chandler. For additional locations or to learn more about Intraceuticals treatments and products, visit intraceuticals.com.

USA, July 2010