Get That Age Defying Glow

To achieve a flawless look, start with healthy-looking skin says Gina Brooke, make-up artist and Intraceuticals ambassador By RINA AHMAD

Properly preparing skin is a sure way to achieve a radiant, even finish. Madonna's favourite method? The Intraceuticals Infusion, a oxygen treatment said to visibly reduce fine lines and wrinkles without pain or injections – popular with celebs during awards season.

This treatment uses oxygen under pressure and hyaluronic acid technology to infuse serums deep into the skin, says Gina Brooke, make-up artist and Intraceuticals brand ambassador.

Gina first came across the brand seven years ago. "I was looking for something to make skin look flawless for my clients," says Brooke, who has styled international celebrities like Madonna, Naomi Campbell, David Beckham, Justin Timberlake and Gwen Stefani. And she has been using it ever since.

Give your skin a treat

There are four different Intraceuticals Infusion treatments available:

- Atoxylene targets fine lines as it firms and plumps up the eye and lip contour.
- Rejuvenate promotes collagen and elastin production for improved skin texture and minimised wrinkles.
- Opulence is a botanical brightener to reduce hyperpigmentation and lighten dark spots, scars and other imperfections.

- Clarity targets existing acne and prevents future breakouts with anti-ageing benefits.

Used in tandem, the serums are said to lift, tone, hydrate and reduce the appearance of wrinkles. "The infusions instant results make it a must have," adds Gina. W

"I was looking for something that would make my skin look flawless for my clients."

A combination of medical and cosmetic science helped Intraceuticals develop its renowned rejuvenation skin system.
